Take Your Seat Around the Fire

Join Andrew and Yola for 9 nights in the Okavango to share a direct experience of the African Wilderness. Our encounter with the wilderness permeates our physiology, our minds, and our hearts, bringing us into harmony with our natural surroundings and the deeper aspects of our Being.

Our ego-selves and cluttered thinking matter very little here and gradually fade away as we gently immerse into a Oneness with the African Wilderness that surrounds us. A surprising clarity of mind begins to emerge, and very often new inspiration comes into our awareness or wisdom transmissions are received from the natural world that may have profound value to us.

The African Wilderness is our guide, and we follow her rhythm as she leads us to our own encounter with the calling to return to our natural state that resides within.

Your Home in the Wilderness

Our wilderness campsites are chosen for their beautiful settings, remote locations, and abundant wildlife, birds, and trees. We are surrounded by the warmth of the African wilderness. The mobile camp consists of a central dining-area tent, a fireside seating area, and each of our two-person en-suite tents fanning out under the surrounding shade. Each tent has two single camp beds with linen, an attached outside boma with a warm bucket shower, chemical toilet, and wash basin.

Here, comfort does not separate you from nature, it brings you closer to it.

"We loosen our attachment to searching for sightings, allowing the wilderness to reveal itself to us. Every moment is unhurried. Every experience, deeply felt."

The Itinerary

After arriving in Maun, Botswana, we overnight in comfortable lodgings before departing early the next morning for our destination - the Moremi Game Reserve, the heart of the Okavango. Our journey passes through villages and Mopani woodlands until we reach the Buffalo Fence, where signs of human habitation fade and the wild, open landscape begins. We enjoy lunch beneath a Camel Thorn tree along the way. The trip to the Buffalo Fence takes about 2 hours, and depending on our sightings of animals, birds, or trees, the final leg to the first campsite can take 4 to 6 hours. Upon arrival, our camp is fully set up and ready to welcome us to our first wilderness home for the next 4 nights.

Southern and Central areas of Moremi The Black Pools/Xaxanaka/Zini

Our camp is set up beneath ancient trees, with a view toward an open water channel. The flood plain between camp and water often serves as a highway for passing animals, and the calls and chatter of birds are our constant companion. We stay here for the first four nights, with camp time interspersed by game drives in open vehicles and a boat excursion that ventures deep into the heart of the Delta. An indescribable peace permeates our heightened senses as we absorb the splendor of each moment, opening our hearts with appreciation and wonder.

Northern area of Moremi: Khwai River

Our next four nights are spent at our second camp, overlooking the Khwai River, one of the richest game-viewing areas in the Delta. The flood plains and riverine forests create a wonderland landscape of natural wilderness. Our camp sits beneath shady trees, overlooking the river's channels and the downstream hippo pools. When we're not in camp, we explore the surrounding areas by open game view vehicle, witnessing the passing procession of the natural African wilderness.

Daily Rhythm

Early morning wake up with a small basin of warm water brought to our tent to wash away sleep, followed by a warm beverage at the fireside, before setting off for a drive in our open game viewer. Mid-morning tea or coffee may be enjoyed beneath a tree that might have sheltered elephants or antelopes just earlier in the day.

We return to camp for a full cooked brunch, then enjoy quiet camp time to rest, reflect, and immerse into quiet contemplation, while watching the natural world pass us by. Often, our camp sightings are as rewarding as our time on the drives. On the day we set out on a water excursion through the deep channels of the Okavango, we take along a picnic lunch to enjoy on one of the many islands in the delta.

Midafternoon is usually a time to come together, share thoughts, insights, dreams, and stories. By late afternoon we prepare for our game-drive meanderings, where we will stop at a vantage point to savor the red African sunset before returning to camp just before nightfall. Warm showers precede a three-course dinner lovingly prepared by our cheerful and tireless chef. We enjoy fireside time together before retiring to our tents to enjoy listening to the sounds of the African night from the warmth and privacy of our tents.

About African Wilderness Wisdom

African Wilderness Wisdom was not created as an enterprise, it was born out of a remembering of what it means to belong - not to a place, but to life itself.

African Wilderness Wisdom was born from a shared reverence for the natural world and a deep understanding that the wilderness offers something far beyond what can be seen. Inspired by years of immersion in Africa's wild places, the founders were drawn to create experiences that move beyond traditional safari - journeys that invite a deeper connection, presence, and remembering. In the stillness of the bush, where the noise of everyday life falls away, something more essential begins to emerge. It was this quiet, transformative power of the wilderness, its ability to strip away distraction, awaken awareness, and reconnect us to ourselves - that inspired the creation of African Wilderness Wisdom. Each journey is designed as an invitation to slow down, to listen, and to experience the wild not as an observer, but as something you are part of.
